fine hall to the doors with an appreciative audience. The principal attraction of a very interesting programme was an address by Rev.

J. Marphy, S. J., pastor of St. Aloysins' church, on "Cilizenship and Religion." The reverend gentleman's remarks were especially interesting at this particular time. While hot approving of the cleary mixing in what is popularly known as political life, he claimed that tool designed that religion and the duties of citizenship shound ever go together in trienshy union, illustrating this point with copious instances from sacred history, showing the corruptions into which men fell when they hall diversed religion from every day duties and purruits of life.
